1971 Charger

Life is a series of paths.
Our lives teem with paths, patterns, and procedures—something to follow. But we, sometimes planned and sometimes not, stop at a place along the way.

This is Southern Wells, our place along the way to the future. A special life style within these walls renders a unique pride to the atmosphere . . . our school, different from all others because it is ours.

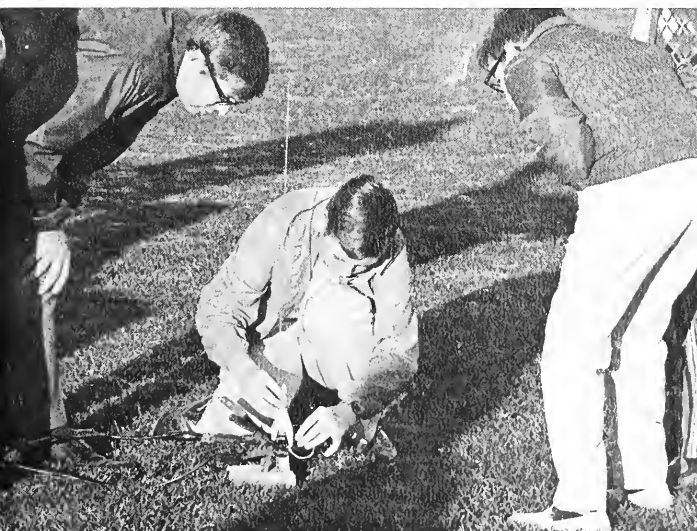

In the many places along our way, our friends were always near—whether we wanted them or not. We worked and learned together, sharing each other's hopes and dreams. But it wasn't always a blissful existence. We felt forced into things by wheedling demands of "C'mon be a pal and . . ." Just having someone to communicate with and be with made our classmates important to us, but, at times, we wondered just what friendship was really all about.

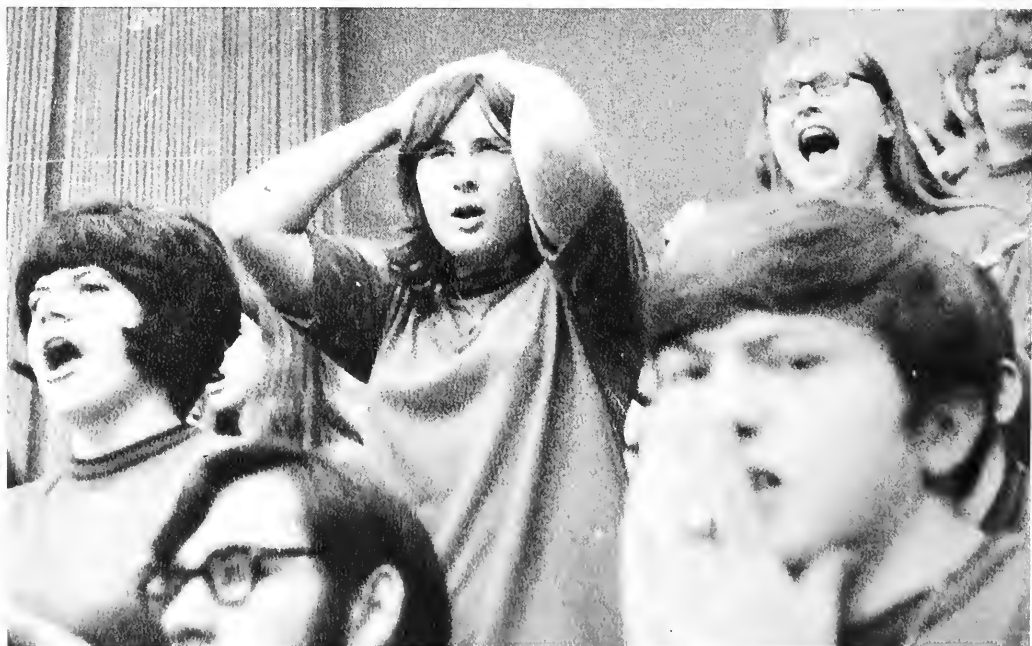

Amidst burgeoning responsibilities, we stopped to ask questions. We needed a chance to readjust our sights and find where we were headed. Delving into our surroundings, we gained an awareness of the immense and complex nature of the world. The political and social problems of our contemporary society challenged us to investigate the possibilities and choices. Advice was sought, decisions made, and opinions traded.

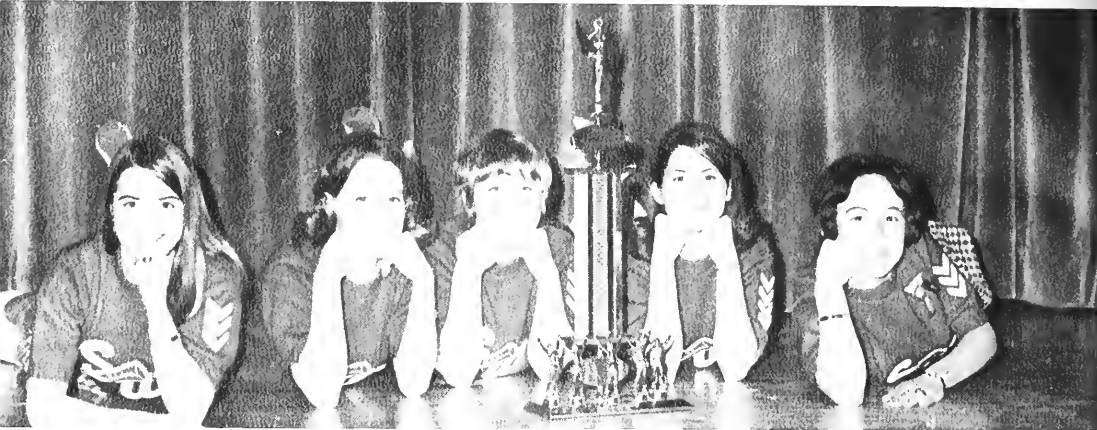

There were times along the way when things didn't run smoothly. The Monday morning blahs reflected moods of despair and gloom. Hard work and discouragement haunted us. Short tempers and tired minds brought days of disillusionment. The good times seemed far away.

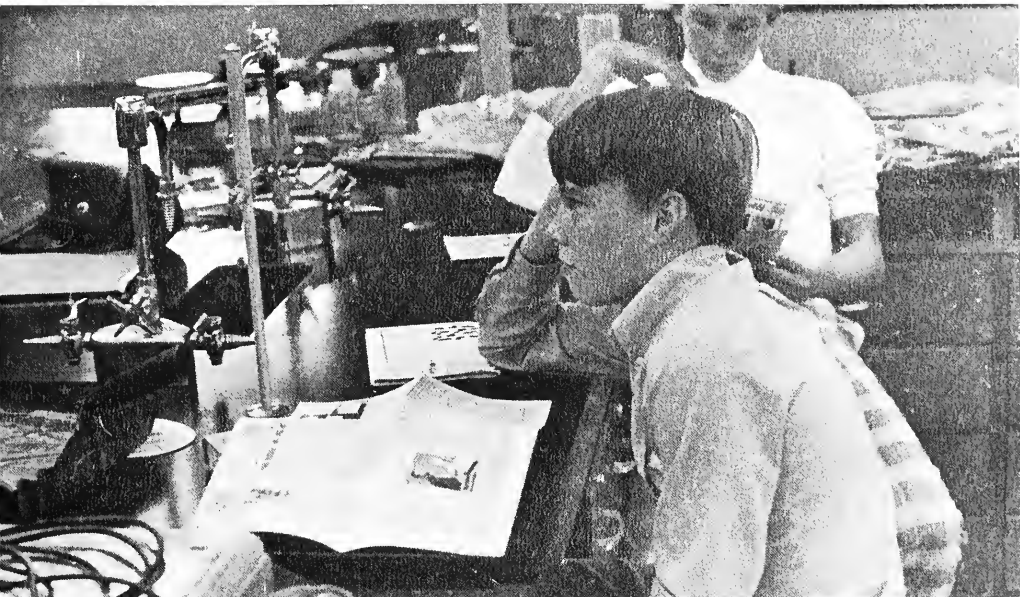

Personal, athletic, and scholastic triumphs, as well as a sense of belonging, created happiness for SW students. Smiling visages and laughter reflected the students' joy. Bad times were forgotten amidst the excitement. The little special, perhaps unexpected, happenings provided a sense that everything was great; we were on top of the world.

The way was not always clear and simple. It sometimes seemed easier not to forge ahead, hard to take the next step. Although we thought we knew what we wanted, we weren't sure of our ability. Our nerves were jittery and our self-confidence flagging. Doubts plagued us.

People

During our journeying, we met many people—some leaders, some followers, but all fellow wanderers. Searching for our own identity, we gained independence and responsibility. Tackling problems within and beyond our comprehension, we sought the answers to countless questions. So alike and yet so different, we ventured together and alone to improve the system.

Faculty

The faculty guided us when we ourselves couldn't see where we were headed. Not giving up easily, they went over our weaker points again and again in preparation for a big test. Sincere friendship was reflected in good-natured bantering. As teachers, advisers, and friends, they shared our moments of triumph and despair.

William Couch introduced new ideas as principal. He received an A.B. from Huntington College and a B.S. and Ed. S. from Ball State.

Jean Kober, school nurse, received her schooling at Lutheran Hospital.

Ben Good helped in guidance and has a B.S. from the University of Maryland and a M.A. from Ball State.

Administrators led the way

Assistant principal Richard Hamilton earned a B.S. and a M.A. from Ball State.

Lloyd Biberstine served as superintendent. He has a B.S. and a M.S. from Ball State University.

Marie Rice and Sue Harshman kept busy as Mr. Biberstine's secretaries.

The personality of a school reflects on the type of people in it, including its leaders. The administration of SW set new goals to modernize our school's personality. An ala carte line was introduced and for the first time students were given a choice of noon lunch. A more relaxed atmosphere came when the administration eliminated bells. Students no longer were rushed in and out of classes. Further privileges came to the SW students as the dress code was permanently changed to include dress slacks and pantsuits for girls. Responsibility was given to seniors as they were granted the privilege of leaving during homeroom. These liberties have proven to be successful for a more enjoyable school life at SW.

Peter W. Cole, Ward D. Showalter, John E. Gilbert, and Glenn A. Barror served on the school board.

Music and art inspired talents

Creative skills were taught to the art and music students as long hours were spent in practice.

The choir classes performed in the Christmas and spring concerts. Among the many activities choral students took part in the NIS-BOVA contest and smaller groups sang in the community.

The SW marching band practiced weekly during the summer months. The Street Fair highlighted the season as the new year brought more practice sessions and preparation to host the NIS-BOVA contest for the district.

Sculpture, pottery, painting, and drawing filled the art room, and many interesting projects developed. Art I worked in two dimensional art while more advanced students created three dimensional objects in clay sculpture.

Directing the band was Thomas McElhaney, who earned a B.M. from DePauw University and a M.A. from Ball State University.

Betty Cline directed the choir and many smaller vocal groups. She has a B.P.S.M. from Indiana University.

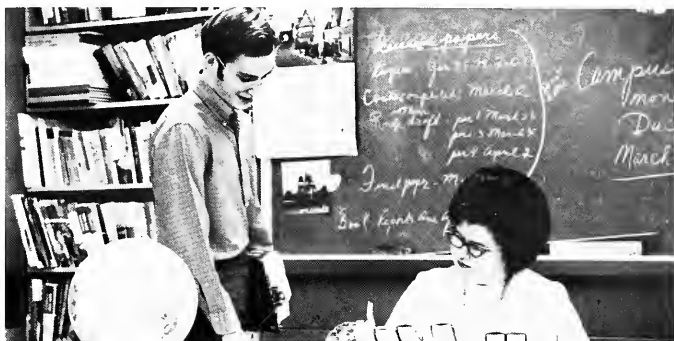

Art was taught this year by Nancy Huffman, a graduate of Ball State University with a B.S. degree.

History spread cultural growth

Jerry Penrod taught U.S. and eighth grade history. He has a B.S. degree from Ball State University.

Values and issues, a new class, and world history was taught by Sally Mittlestedt. She has a B.S. from Taylor University and a M.A. from Ball State University.

Nellie Williams taught government, economics, and seventh grade history. She has a B.S. from Central Normal College and a M.A. from Ball State.

Teaching U.S. history and seventh grade geography was James Hotopp, who has a B.A. degree from Earlham College.

The social studies department introduced many ideas into the classes this year. Students participated in debates concerning slavery issues and current events, wrote term papers, and worked on various projects throughout the year. Some projects involved a home-made movie concerning the Battle of Valley Forge, which the juniors made, and the making of historical relics by the sophomores.

Besides regular class discussion, the teachers used film strips, movies, and records to help the students learn.

English improved communication

Vivian LeMaster taught English at SW. She has a B.S. from Huntington College and a M.A. from St. Francis College.

Donno Simpson helped students in the reading lab and taught jr. high English. She has a B.S. and a M.A. from Ball State.

Teaching freshman and seventh grade English was Michael Gearheart, who earned a B.S. degree from Ball State University.

English was a required course for all students in grades 7 through 11, and a college preparatory course was offered to seniors. The elements of grammar were reviewed to assure the student's excellent speaking and writing skill. Spelling and vocabulary developed the skills of speech and composition to more advanced levels.

Journalism also applied the skills of English grammar and composition in the production of the RAIDER NEWS, RAIDER REVIEW, and the CHARGER.

In the language department Ronald Miller taught Spanish and French classes. Mr. Miller has a B.S. degree from Ball State University.

Ardath Miner taught seventh grade and senior English. She received a B.S. degree from Manchester College.

Sarah Kindlesparger supervised the library and audio-visual equipment and has a B.S. and M.A. from Ball State.

Mastering a foreign language was the goal of the language students in French and Spanish classes. Listening to tapes helped them in comprehension of the conversations and in the correct pronunciation and grammar in the speaking of the language. A basic vocabulary was learned with the basic elements of grammar and spelling which was applied in composition and conversation.

The language students participated in word games designed to increase the vocabulary. Question and answer periods helped the students gain an understanding of written dialogues. The students learned about the geography and the history of the countries whose languages they learned.

Language and library spread knowledge

Science stimulated young minds

Advanced math and algebra classes were taught by Stanley Morton. He is a graduate of Taylor University with a B.S. degree.

Physics and jr. high math classes kept Lewis Captain busy. He received a B.S.C.E. from Purdue and an M.A. from Ball State.

Paul Lieurance supervised agriculture at SW. He is a graduate of Purdue with a B.S. degree.

To inspire the students to think and gain a larger sense of logic was the aim of the math department. The department was aided by new math books.

The geometry classes planned the displays for the display case. The students received grades for their geometric displays, which could be made of any material.

In Algebra I the students learned to use basic algebraic expressions, while the Algebra II classes worked with more complex forms of equations. Individual thinking, as well as the application of techniques learned in algebra classes, was stressed in Senior Math.

Robert Meyer taught geometry and jr. high math. Mr. Meyer has a B.S. degree from St. Francis College.

Camille Centers taught jr. high, basic, and earth science. She has a B.S. from Ball State and a M.A.T. from Michigan State University.

Jr. high science and practical chemistry were directed by James Roush. He has a B.S. from Purdue and a M.A. from Ball State.

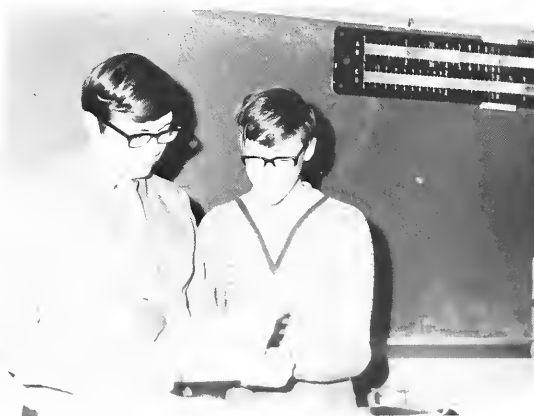

Chemistry, eighth grade math and general math were taught by Lawrence Garrison. He has a B.S. from Ball State.

Larry Sell supervised biology classes. Mr. Sell is a graduate of Huntington College with a B.S. degree.

Basic courses in biology, chemistry, physics and earth science prepared SW students for the future.

Biologists identified leaves, dissected specimens from earthworms to fish. Advanced students studied the cat and the pig. Chemistry classes took a closer look at the elements and their behavior while physics was more involved with motion and matter. Earth science classes discussed the make-up of the earth.

Practical skills prepared us

An exploratory technique was used in teaching the Jr. High students graphing and woodworking classes. Supplying the basic ideas of industrial arts, it gave the Jr. High students a chance to decide about taking i.a. classes in high school.

Shop safety was the major aim of the high school students while working with power tools.

Each student chose a project to make. Some of the most popular projects were lamps and bookshelves.

David Gibson supervised industrial arts classes. He has a B.S. degree from Ball State University.

Managing the cafeteria and teaching home economics classes was Mary Alice Laymon. She graduated from Ball State with a B.S. degree.

Supervising physical education classes was Donald Kistler who earned a B.S. degree from Ball State University.

Physical education was a required course for all students in grades 7 through 10 and was offered as an elective to juniors and seniors who served as p.e. assistants.

Becoming familiar with a variety of sports made p.e. important. Participation encouraged sportsmanship and cooperation, and developed basic coordination and skill.

Karen Hatch taught girl's physical education and earned a B.S. from Huntington College.

Kathryn Foy supervised C.O.E. and business classes. She has an A.B. and M.A. from Ball State.

Home management, cooking, sewing, and child care were a few of the important skills learned in home economics. Students modeled their clothing in a style show and served new recipes at teas. The sophomores took a home nursing course while the juniors learned to make house plans. Family living students ran a nursery school and discussed problems they will face in dating and marriage.

Business education offered a wide range of opportunities to SW students. It provided practical business knowledge, skills, and ideals which are important in business and social living.

Business education helped students in everyday buying, selling, and banking. As a student advanced, he acquired vocational skills which will enable him to secure a good job after graduation.

Teaching in the business department was Kenneth McFall. He earned a B.S. degree from Ball State University.

Karen Smekens taught business classes at SW. She has a B.S. degree from Ball State University.

Patricia Bowdell taught home economics and family living. She has a B.S. and M.A. from Ball State University.

School Life

Lockers 'set' ... hiccups in class ... racing the clocks ... "Where's your pass?" Life at SW was an ever-constant parade of people, events, and emotions. Relegating assignments to oblivion, flunking the forgotten tests, and disagreeing with the teachers passed on as just another day in our school life.

The SW students' involvement in politics manifests itself in a visit to a Ft. Wayne campaign rally.

Juniors, seniors with impatient

The Class of '71 ended its high school career on May 23. Decorated in the senior colors, light and navy blue, the gym was the scene of the Baccalaureate and the Commencement. After the Baccalaureate sermon by Rev. Dave Hess, Mrs. Nellie Williams presented Bibles to the seniors. Instead of having a Commencement speaker, the seniors chose fellow classmates Robey Taylor, Sue Inskeep, and Bob Halterman to address the audience. Salutatorian Steve Roush and Valedictorian Susie Haines also presented their thoughts about graduation. After being presented with their long-awaited diplomas, the graduates gathered at the end of the gym, where they sang their class song, "We've Only Just Begun".

awaited events longing

"A Time For Us" was the theme of the first all-night prom for SW students and guests on May 8. Streams of hot pink, hot green, and hot yellow crepe paper adorned the gym and cafetorium, while the hall between contained a garden setting consisting of flowers, trees, stones, and a fountain. Overseen by King Mike Johns and Queen Susie Haines, The Three Brothers provided music for the formal segment of the prom. The informal prom began with the showing of the film "MacKenna's Gold" in the cafetorium, which was decorated with movie posters. At the same time, music, supplied by Sublime, and dancing could be enjoyed in the gym. At 5:00 a.m. breakfast was served, followed by a short message by Reverend Dave Hess.

Assemblies provoked laughter, thought, concern

Bill Hanley of the Light Company receives last minute instructions from Mr. Couch before the show.

Presented for the entertainment and education of the student body, convocations enriched the students' scope of varied professions. These assemblies were sponsored by either the Student Council or the Sunshine Society.

On October 27, Mr. Buck Stewart, his wife, and daughter presented a sharpshooting exhibition in the gymnasium. Stressing the importance of gun safety, the Stewarts performed a series of trick shots.

Formerly a missionary surgeon near Inhambane, Mozambique, East Africa, Dr. Robert Simpson lectured to the student body about his job, his travels, and religion on November 9. He compared tribal culture to that of today's teens.

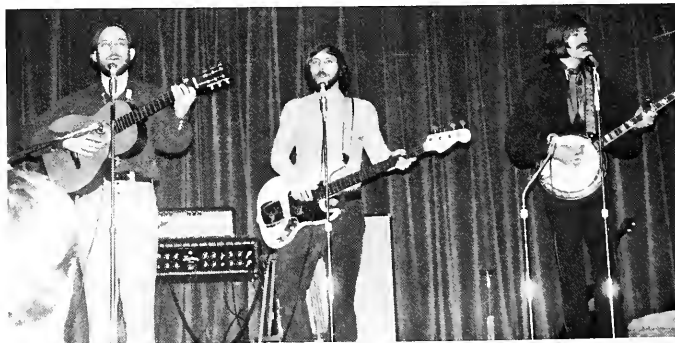

The Light Company, a trio of young United Methodist ministers attempting to spread evangelism in the same manner a light bulb radiates light, gave students the opportunity to relate lyrics to living in a concert presented February 8.

Demonstrating the art of ventriloquism, Mr. Clifford Guest and his dummy conversed amusingly during a program held in the cafetorium on April 7.

Emphasizing the value of freedom, The Free Fare, a new type of musical comedy team of five, used popular rock music and humorous skits to convey their message of love and peace to the student body on April 26.

Sports

Some students found their places in sports. SW athletics went deeper than winning and losing. The personal sacrifices and risks taken when a student participated in athletics weren't often reflected in won-lost records. The athlete disciplined himself and carefully budgeted his time, often with little or no recognition. He learned that the teamwork put forth in sports was applicable to life.

Activities

Engaging in many different activities, we found our paths filled with practices, field trips, meetings, and moneymaking projects. Absorbed in making friends and doing good, we gained the experience of working with, and for, others.

The sound of voices joined in song was a well-known sound at Southern Wells. Mrs. Betty Cline led a choir of 162 voices, and also directed several of the smaller divisions of the choir. The Singers and the Senior Set were two of the many groups which performed in the community. The choir classes began the year by practicing for the Christmas concert, which was presented on December 13.

At the district NISBOVA contest, 108 gold medals and 91 silver medals were received. Those who qualified for state competition traveled to Butler University and returned with 40 gold medals and 41 silver medals.

In May the choir performed in a Spring Gala Concert, which included music ranging in style from popular to religious to Broadway hits. The year ended with the singing of a few numbers at the Baccalaureate.

As the Troubadours perform, attention focuses on Mrs. Cline.

Emphasis placed on fluency

The Senior High Art Club, sponsored by Mrs. Nancy Huffman, supervised the spring art exhibit. A few art students participated in the Sixth Annual Art Show sponsored by Tri Kappa of Bluffton.

The Art Club took a field trip to Indianapolis to tour the Museum of Art.

Language Club was a place for students to learn about the languages, customs, and histories of Spain and France. The club wasn't just for serious learning; there were parties, trips, and other activities to enjoy.

At the February meeting Bruce Dawson told about his summer visits to France and displayed souvenirs he had collected.

In March a field trip was taken to the Taco Inn in Ft. Wayne. At the Inn everyone satisfied his curiosity by sampling various Spanish foods. After their initiation to Spanish food, the members went to a Ft. Wayne Komets hockey game.

Learning and sharing ideas at the monthly meetings was an integral part of the History Club's activities. Guest speakers related information on topics of historic significance or current concern. Mr. Neil Brinneman's address pertained to his experiences as a missionary in Africa and Mexico. Mr. Brinneman shared his knowledge of the African and Mexican people.

History Club members and their sponsor, Mrs. Sally Mittlestedt, traveled to Conner Prairie, where they observed a pioneer settlement and visited a museum in the village.

The officers were: Debbie Minnear, president; Ervin Glass, vice-president; and Cindy Mossburg, secretary-treasurer.

Seeking to comply with the demands of the students and the expectations of the faculty, the SW Student Council served as a communications link between pupils and the administration. The Council was guided by Mrs. Nellie Williams and Mr. William Couch.

During the 1970-1971 school year, the Student Council met to discuss issues pertaining to school activities. Council members revised the school dress code to permit the wearing of slack outfits and sponsored dances. Led by Sue Inskip, president; Mike Schweikhardt, vice-president; and Sue Haines, secretary; the members were responsible for the presentation of several convocations. The Sadie Hawkins Dance, a hillbilly dance where typical dating procedures were reversed, was also a Student Council project.

Sunshiners exercised good will

Sunshine president Sandi Sleppy and vice-president Cheryl Mounsey discuss duties of their offices.

Cheryl Mounsey presents Mrs. Eldon Carnes with a plaque dedicated to the memory of her husband.

Bringing enjoyment to others was the aim of the Sunshine Society. The 120 members gave parties and presented assemblies for the students, gave gifts to those forgotten at Christmas, presented a plaque to the school in the memory of Mr. Carnes, sold candy at Christmas time, and donated money to the Red Cross and the Riley Hospital. The Sunshiners also enjoyed the many meetings and programs, such as January's Ma, Pa, and Me supper, where the guest speaker, Bob Sievers, entertained the girls and their parents with a travelogue on his latest trip to Australia. The sponsors, Mrs. Kathryn Foy and Mrs. Donna Simpson, felt that the girls, through their charitable actions, have gained the satisfaction of doing something worthwhile.

"Find-a-friend" at Cooper Rest Home was one of the projects that the 31 members of the Senior Future Homemakers undertook during the Christmas season. The members also visited the Bethel Boys' Home to raise the boys' spirit.

Special speakers for the year were Sergeant Tom Jacks, a member of the Indiana State Police Public Relations Dept., who gave a talk on drugs before presenting a film, and Debbie May, Miss Indiana.

The FHA teamed up with the SSS for the Sweetheart Dance in the spring. Each girl also chose a woman in the community as her Ideal Homemaker. The Ideal Homemakers were honored at a luncheon in May.

Officers of the Senior Future Homemakers of America were: Dana Tucker, president; Karen Rogers, vice-president; Lee Ann Kellogg, secretary; and Debbie Hamilton, treasurer. Sponsoring the FHA was Mrs. Pat Bowdell and the parent sponsor, Mrs. Opal Tucker.

Caring for others is a belief of young people today and one the Jr. High FHA'ers share. The FHA girls, under the guidance of Mrs. Pat Bowdell, chose a teacher to help in various small ways.

The members listened to Mr. Donald Storm, administrator of the Ft. Wayne Childrens' Home, who told about the Childrens' Home, the Woodhaven Home for Unwed Mothers, and its adoption agency.

The SW chapter invited area FHA chapters to listen to Debbie May, Miss Indiana, speak.

The officers were: Jennifer McMillan, president; Penny Habig, vice-president; Joy Crosby, secretary; and Sherry Elliott, treasurer.

Tours sparked further scientific interest

SCIENCE CLUB—Mr. Garrison, Sharlene Helms, Mary Habig, Rodney James, Dana Lloyd, Mr. Sell. ROW 2—Barbara Seal, Mark Hamilton, Debbie Minniear, Mike Jones, Dave Keller, Don Swartz.

Composed of students interested in medical or paramedical occupations, the Health Careers Club participated in community health projects. In February the members assisted Mrs. Jean Kober, in giving fluoride treatments to second and fifth graders at the elementary schools and to the eighth graders at SW. The Health Careers Club also sponsored a blood bank.

At regular meetings, Dr. Robert Steckbeck, anesthesiologist, Mrs. Henrietta Lee, anesthetist, and Mrs. Agnes Miller, physical therapist, explained common techniques.

In April the Health Careers Club and the Science Club took a trip to Indianapolis, where they toured the Eli Lilly Drug Company and the I.U. Medical Center.

Realizing the need for research, the Science Club visited the Caylor-Nickel Research Building. While there, the members learned about the kinds of research done and what training is necessary for researchers.

The members' roles at the Science Fair were to get the judges and the awards and to serve food.

The science Club accompanied the Health Careers Club to Indianapolis to tour the Eli Lilly Drug Company and the I.U. Medical Center on April 19.

ROW 3—Lana Mertz, Susie Fisher, Connie Higgins, Sue Bower, Janice Miller, Debbie Minniear, Scott Johnson, Robey Taylor, Sten Fuller.

Sponsored by Mrs. Sally Tinkel, the National Honor Society was governed by the principles of character, service, leadership and scholarship. During the 1970-1971 school year, four seniors and twenty juniors, who had maintained the necessary 7.5 grade average, were inducted into the organization in a ceremony held March 5.

Included in the Honor Society's activities was a "Dessert" held March 17 in honor of the society members. Parents were invited and membership certificates were presented to the new members.

Movies, dancing, sports, and psychedelic painting were on the agenda of the Honor Society sponsored "Happening", March 13.

FTA, NHS set high standards

Members of the Future Teachers of America traveled to White's Institute where they observed classes and teaching procedures. An evening was also spent comparing notes with the Oak Hill FTA in an informal tea.

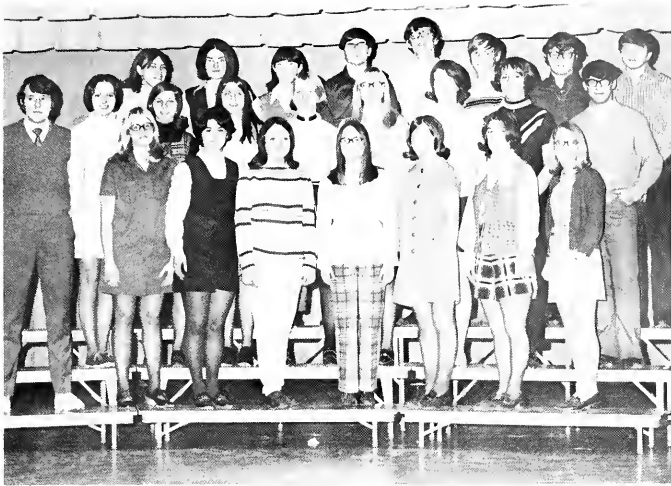

At the monthly meetings student teachers related some of their early teaching experiences and Mrs. Sally Tinkel discussed college entrance requirements. Relating amusing and interesting experiences in his teaching career and explaining the differences between administration and teaching was Mr. Couch's presentation.

Movies from the Indiana State Teachers Association aided the FTA members in career discussion.

Sponsoring the FTA was Mrs. Ardath Miner. Officers were: Robey Taylor, president; Susie Haines, vice-president; and Ruby Habegger, secretary-treasurer.

Kim Buckland hesitates during SW Press Association initiation.

During the 1970-1971 school year the Publications Department published the RAIDER NEWS, RAIDER REVIEW, and the 1971 CHARGER.

The Southern Wells Press Association, which originated in November, was an honorary organization in which membership was a reward for the individual's effort and ability.

The Quill and Scroll was an international honorary society for high school journalists to encourage and honor individual achievement in journalism and school publications. The students were nominated by Mr. Pugh and the names were sent to the University of Iowa for approval. New members were Bob Halterman, Mike Jones, Sue Bower, Sandi Sleppy, Sue Fisher, Carol Martin, Jim Brubaker, and Cindy Pinkerton.

Some activities sponsored this year were a horror movie and a special event for Earth Day.

SW Pep Club encourages the Raiders to another victory.

"Raiders, Raiders. . . ." This cry which echoes still in the bleakness of the empty Southern Wells gym was emitted again and again by the loyal pep club, known as the Raider Invaders. This group of Southern Wells students was organized under the direction of Mrs. Karen Hatch and Mr. Bob Meyer. A membership of 24 boys and 100 girls stayed relatively constant although the numbers dwindled slightly as the season progressed. Those who remained saw the Raiders through the sectional, then said a farewell to the 1970-1971 season.

Band hosted NISBOVA contest

Mr. McElhane lends moral support to drummer Jeff Williams while playing at a basketball game.

One hundred-nine instrumentalists, each a member of one or more of the three units composing the Southern Wells Band Department, learned that individual effort and teamwork go hand in hand in the presentation of any musical program. Conducted by Mr. Thomas McElhane, the bands often strove together to represent Southern Wells to the best of their abilities. The winter and spring pep festivals and the hosting of the annual NISBOVA contest for the area were the three bands' efforts.

Assisted by the pompon squad and the color guard, the 48 member senior band performed at marching contests and parades. Playing challenging music at contests and concerts, and providing entertainment at pep session and home basketball games were the activities carried out by the senior band.

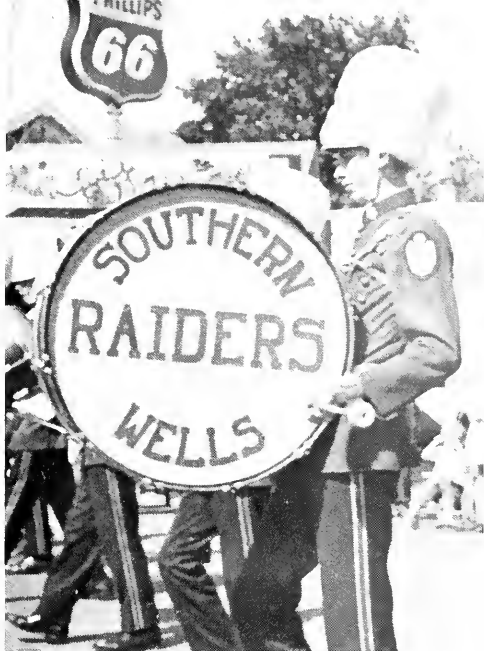

The Raiderettes precede the Southern Wells Marching Band along the parade route.

The SW Band's performance leads to a tie for fourth place at the Bluffton Street Fair contest.

Raider instrumentalists experience butterflies as they approach the judges' stand.

Ervin Glass creates the heartbeat of the band as he pounds out a basic rhythm on the bass drum.

The 60 members of the junior band increased their musical knowledge and gained fundamental experience through private lessons included in the summer band programs and daily class rehearsals during the school year. Presenting brief concerts at the three Southern Wells elementary schools was a part of the junior band's schedule.

Contrasting a free and easy style of music with some of the more refined and classical numbers of the junior and senior bands was the main function of the stage band.

The Band Boosters also contributed to the making of a profitable and successful year for the band department as they again managed the booth at the Street Fair and served lunch to those attending the NISBOVA contest.
